Notice of Data Breach

Dear <<first_name>> <<middle_name>> <<last_name>> <<suffix>>,

We are writing to inform you of a security incident that may have involved some of your personal information. IMX Medical Management Services, Inc. (IMX) provides medical evaluation and review services to insurance carriers, third-party administrators, employers, law firms, and other businesses. In providing these services, IMX may receive personal information and/or protected health information from our customers and may have collected information about you when scheduling and performing examinations for <<b2b_text_4(data owners)>>. You are receiving this notice because your personal information may have been affected by this incident. Please read this notice carefully to learn more about the incident and what you can do to protect yourself.

What Happened

On September 1, 2022, IMX discovered initial indicators of a security incident, which involved a single laptop that was found to contain malware possibly as early as June 2022. IMX conducted a preliminary triage investigation, then discovered additional malware indicators on its network. IMX took its systems offline to prevent further impact on customer data and IMX systems. IMX conducted a forensic investigation of this incident and identified the impacted systems. IMX's investigation found that a threat actor gained access to certain IMX systems and devices through October 2022. IMX has not identified any evidence of the threat actor on IMX systems since IMX took its systems offline in October 2022. After identifying the affected systems, IMX undertook an extensive and complex analysis of the affected data to determine the personal information affected by this incident. IMX also notified law enforcement about the incident.

What Information Was Involved

IMX typically receives information about claimants from IMX's customers through established channels in connection with the medical evaluation services IMX provides, including email and files received via the IMX portal. Email messages may contain personal information of claimants, including medical evaluation information. Based on our investigation, the threat actor had access to the bodies of email messages associated with certain user accounts but did not access or exfiltrate the attachments to those messages. The threat actor also appears to have had access to certain folders on IMX's servers, which could have contained personal information of claimants.

Our investigation has revealed that this incident may have affected the following types of personal information about you: <<b2b_text_1(data elements)>>.

What We Are Doing

IMX took steps to contain the issue and remove the threat actor from the IMX network and conducted a thorough investigation. We blocked the transmission of data into and out of our network to prevent any further unauthorized access to personal information. We also used systems and infrastructure operated by our parent company, QTC Management, Inc. (QTC), to establish a new network to securely process the data of our customers. The QTC network operates separately from the legacy IMX network and, on a going-forward basis, IMX will exclusively use the new QTC-operated network.

What You Can Do

We encourage you to carefully review the Additional Resources appendix to this letter, as it contains information about the steps you can take to protect yourself against fraud and identity theft. We are offering all affected individuals two (2) years of complimentary credit monitoring and identity protection services. Additional Resources

Free Credit Report. You can obtain a free copy of your credit report once every 12 months from each of the three nationwide credit bureaus. We have provided the contact information for each of the nationwide credit bureaus below. You can also obtain a free credit report by visiting www.annualcreditreport.com or by calling, toll-free, (877) 322-8228.

If you see anything on your credit report that you do not understand, you should notify the credit bureau that sent you the report immediately. If you find any suspicious activity on your credit report, call your local police or sheriff's office, and file a police report for identity theft. You have a right to obtain a copy of the police report, which you may need to provide to creditors to clear up your records.

Fraud Alerts. There are two types of fraud alerts you can place on your credit report to put your creditors on notice that you may be a victim of fraud—an initial alert and an extended alert. You may ask that an initial fraud alert be placed on your credit report if you suspect you have been, or are about to be, a victim of identity theft. An initial fraud alert stays on your credit report for at least one year. You may have an extended alert placed on your credit report if you have already been a victim of identity theft and you have the appropriate documentary proof. An extended fraud alert stays on your credit report for seven years. You can place a fraud alert on your credit report by contacting any of the three national credit reporting agencies.

Security Freeze. You have the ability to place a security freeze, also known as a credit freeze, on your credit report free of charge. A security freeze is intended to prevent credit, loans and services from being approved in your name without your consent. To place a security freeze on your credit report, you may use an online process, an automated telephone line, or submit a written request to any of the three credit reporting agencies listed above. The following information must be included when requesting a security freeze (note that, if you are requesting a credit report for your spouse, this information must be provided for him/her as well): (1) full name, with middle initial and any suffixes; (2) Social Security number; (3) date of birth; (4) current address and any previous addresses for the past 5 years; and (5) any applicable incident report or complaint with a law enforcement agency or the Registry of Motor Vehicles. The request must also include a copy of a government-issued identification card and a copy of a recent utility bill or bank or insurance statement. It is essential that each copy be legible, and display your name, current mailing address, and the date of issue.

Additional Information. You can learn more about protecting yourself from identity theft and fraud, including how to request that a fraud alert or security freeze be placed on your credit report, from the Federal Trade Commission at <http://www.ftc.gov/idtheft>. You can also call the FTC at 1-877-IDTHEFT (438-4338) or contact the FTC by mail at Identity Theft Clearinghouse, Federal Trade Commission, 600 Pennsylvania Avenue, N.W., Washington, DC 20580.
