Re: Notice of Data Breach

Dear Sample A Sample,

As you may know, HoneyBaked recently suffered and recovered from a malware attack. We do not know of or expect misuse of anyone's data as a result of this incident, but out of an abundance of caution and because we care about your privacy and security, we are making two years of credit monitoring available to you. This notice explains the incident, measures we have taken, and steps you can take in response.

What happened? On Sunday, December 13th, our systems became encrypted, blocking access to those systems. Clearly the goal of the attack was to interrupt our business in the heart of the Christmas season. We immediately brought in third-party experts on this type of malware and notified law enforcement. We were able to restore our systems and data from backups with a lot of help from our IT Department and many of you. We have done everything possible to protect your data, and do not know of or expect any misuse of anyone's data. Sensitive customer information such as payment card information or online credentials is completely outsourced to vendors whose systems were not attacked.

What information was involved? Again, we do not know of or expect misuse of anyone's data, but it is possible that your Social Security number or date of birth was temporarily exposed. If our continuing investigation turns up any evidence that your data was used inappropriately, we will let you know.

What we are doing and what you can do: HoneyBaked is committed to safeguarding your personal information and has taken prompt steps to enhance the protections that were already in place before this incident.

In an abundance of caution, to help protect your identity, we are offering a complimentary two-year membership of Experian's[®] IdentityWorksSM. Fraud Alerts. There are two types of fraud alerts you can place on your credit report to put your creditors on notice that you may be a victim of fraud—an initial alert and an extended alert. You may ask that an initial fraud alert be placed on your credit report if you suspect you have been, or are about to be, a victim of identity theft. An initial fraud alert stays on your credit report for at least one year. You may have an extended alert placed on your credit report if you have already been a victim of identity theft and you have the appropriate documentary proof. An extended fraud alert stays on your credit report for seven years. You can place a fraud alert on your credit report by contacting any of the three national credit reporting agencies.

Security Freeze. You have the ability to place a security freeze, also known as a credit freeze, on your credit report free of charge.

A security freeze is intended to prevent credit, loans and services from being approved in your name without your consent. To place a security freeze on your credit report, you may use an online process, an automated telephone line, or submit a written request to any of the three credit reporting agencies listed above. The following information must be included when requesting a security freeze (note that, if you are requesting a security freeze for your spouse, this information must be provided for him/her as well): (1) full name, with middle initial and any suffixes; (2) Social Security number; (3) date of birth; (4) current address and any previous addresses for the past 5 years; and (5) any applicable incident report or complaint with a law enforcement agency or the Registry of Motor Vehicles. The request must also include a copy of a government-issued identification card and a copy of a recent utility bill or bank or insurance statement. It is essential that each copy be legible, and display your name, current mailing address, and the date of issue.

Federal Trade Commission and State Attorneys General Offices. If you believe you are the victim of identity theft or have reason to believe your personal information has been misused, you should immediately contact the Federal Trade Commission and/or the Attorney General's office in your home state. You may also contact these agencies for information on how to prevent or minimize the risks of identity theft.
